New Article: "Redefining a global Cosmopolitanism: An attempt towards openness as a central concept in postcolonia conflict resolution"

07.05.2024 -

Abstract of the Paper

The paper deals with the question whether cosmopolitanism is still a relevant concept for conflict resolution and peacebuildi First, three common criticisms of cosmopolitanism are addressed, namely that it is Eurocentric, elitist and hegemonic. The pap concludes that these criticisms tend to focus on a limited liberal understanding of cosmopolitanism that does not do justice to t diversity of the concept. A redefinition and renarration of cosmopolitanism from a postcolonial standpoint is therefore necessa Such a definition can only be an open minimal definition that leaves room for appropriation and localisation. This new, glol perspective on cosmopolitanism is then evaluated against the background of conflict resolution in practice. The relevance of t concept becomes apparent when looking at the presence of elitist cosmopolitanism in the field.
