

MASTER PROGRAMME PEACE AND CONFLICT STUDIES

News

New publication by Tim Heinkelmann-Wild, Daniel Beck and Alexander Spencer

ABSTRACT

An increased number of refugees entering Germany between 2015 and 2017 has resulted in a fierce political debate on the potentials and dangers of increased immigration and the meaning of 'refugees' in the country. So far, most studies on the social construction of the 'refugee' either have focused on the linkage between immigration and threats, such as terrorism, or examined the process of constituting the 'refugee' as a passive victim without agency. By adopting a post-structuralist perspective and combining insights from discourse theory and metaphor analysis, we examine the social construction of the 'refugee' in the German tabloid media. We investigate an instance in 2016 in which specific refugees from Syria were constructed not as terrorists or as victims but as heroes following their help in the arrest of a terrorist in Chemnitz. While this constitution of the heroic refugee appears to be a positive development at first, we argue that the celebration of the good refugee is in fact counterproductive as it reinforces the idea that it is unusual for refugees to oppose terrorism. By celebrating the unique heroic refugee, the German tabloid media unwittingly constitutes the large majority of refugees as 'others', cementing the understanding of the German 'self'.

KEYWORDS: Refugees, Germany, discourse, war on terror, heroes

02.08.2019 - The article by Tim-Heinkelmann-Wild, Daniel Beck and Prof. Dr. Alexander Spencer (http://www.pacs.ovgu.de/Team/Prof_+Dr_+Alexander+Spencer-p-468.html) examines the social construction of the 'refugee' in the German tabloid media by investigating an instance in 2016 in which specific refugees from Syria were constructed not as terrorists or as victims but as heroes following their help in the arrest of a terrorist in Chemnitz.

New publication by Siddharth Tripathi and Kristina Roepstorff

28.07.2019 - Examining the specific case of India, the article illustrates how the historical, religious and spiritual traditions and the politics of the subcontinent have informed Indian discourses on peace with the potential to fertilise global dialogues on peace and peacebuilding.

Cooperation with the Hochschule Magdeburg Stendal

24.05.2019 -

We are very pleased about the cooperation with the Hochschule Magdeburg Stendal.

In an exchange of modules, PACS students can attend the seminar "Journalism as Actors in War and Armed Conflict" with Prof. Dr. Eric Chouviré at the Hochschule in the coming winter semester. In exchange, students from the Hochschule come to the OvGU to attend the lecture "Introduction to Peace and Conflict Studies" with the new PACS freshmen.

Deadline Approaching

24.05.2019 -

Apply now!

You still have time until the 15th of July to apply for the PACS Master program starting this October.

PACS INTERNATIONAL 2-YEAR MASTER'S PROGRAMME IN GERMANY

PEACE AND CONFLICT STUDIES

Deadline approaching 15.07.2019 APPLY NOW!

PACS is a Master's programme at Otto von Guericke University Magdeburg lasting four semesters during which the students acquire detailed insights into theories and methods of peace and conflict studies.

APPLY NOW!

gain knowledge about causes and consequences of social conflict	YOU WILL learn how to implement sustainable peaceful solutions	study with international colleagues in an interdisciplinary and critical environment
---	--	--

FOR MORE INFORMATION AND TO APPLY VISIT
WWW.PACS.OVGU.DE

@PACSmagdeburg pacs@ovgu.de

« 7 8 9 10 12 13 14 15 »

APPLY

Admission Requirement

Study Programme

PACS Team

DAAD
Scholarship

Publications

Our Students